WHEN KIMYO OPENS THE DOOR

by Kim Ji-yun
KW 18,000 | 48p | 260X250
ISBN 9791170821496

In the peaceful White Rabbit Village, a peculiar newcomer named Kimyo appears. Kimyo has always lived alone, feeling lonely, for being different from others. One day, gathering their courage, Kimyo opens the door and sets out on a journey. Along the way, Kimyo meets a Two-headed Bird. And soon after a bat, a baby Three-eyed Dog, and even a Moon Toad join them. Traveling together, Kimyo and their companions — each with their own unique appearance and anxieties — gradually come to understand one another and become true friends. Drawing on symbolic figures from Korean folk paintings, this picture book delicately explores themes of difference, identity, relationships, and growth.

WELL

by Saida
KW 15,000 | 44p | 158X180
ISBN 9791170821625

Well, what could this be? You may peer at “well” this way and that, but it’s still a mystery. But never doubt “well.” The moment you do, it may be easily cast aside. And don’t forget to be careful with “no way.” Even if you sprinkle a few drops of “what if,” and “well” still won’t open, try calling your friends! Then you’ll meet even more friends—friends you’ll want to keep meeting again and again. That’s why today, once more, we find ourselves peering into “well.” This picture book is a story about discovering the hidden energy inside the words we use every day.

THE 몬스터 MONSTERS

AT THE END OF THE FOREST

NEW

The forest is the home of the water deer. But one day, the trees begin to leave the forest. Something enormous shakes the ground, grass is crushed, and the whole world grows loud and restless. The water deer searches for a new forest, but its journey is dangerous and frightening. When it finally returns, there is no longer a place for it in the forest. Rather than simply accusing development of destroying the environment, this picture book invites readers to reflect on what it truly means when someone's home disappears. It is a final record, told from their perspective, of how the non-human world collapses as human civilization encroaches upon it.

WORDS FROM THE SEASONS

by Haerang hyeran
KW 18,000 | 52p | 246X258
ISBN 9791170821144

NEW

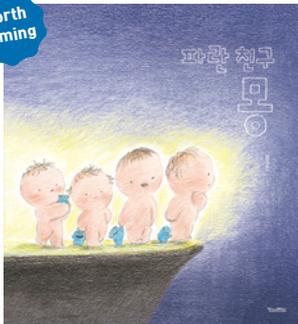

Two people find each other charming. They meet again at an unexpected crossroads and enjoy the warm spring days with shy and fluttering hearts. In the heat of summer, when the green grows deeper, their hearts become as sweet as watermelons. As the seasons change and faded maple leaves announce the arrival of autumn, their feelings slowly begin to change.

This picture book portrays the meeting and parting of lovers through refined words, giving a poem-like impression. Words connecting the seasons and the lovers are woven into the images. Through concise sentences and evocative illustrations capturing the ever-changing moments of life, just like the seasons, this book tells a full narrative of love and memories.

MY BLUE FRIEND MONG

by Oh Seung-min
KW 17,000 | 56p | 210X230
ISBN 9791170821687

Forth coming

A star falls from the sky. Mong carefully brings it home, protecting it and caring for it. The star grows and grows, like a plant sprouting upward, and finally, inside the star, Mong meets the baby it has been waiting for. Mong's mission is to take care of the baby until it safely reaches their mother and is ready to begin life in the world. Now the babies ride the Samshin Train and set off one by one to meet their mothers. Inspired by the Mongolian spot—something babies are born with that quietly fades as they grow—this picture book reflects on the wonder of life, a mother's love, and the meaning of care.

KW 15,000 | 44p | 315X253
ISBN 9788956188560

The doll factory is busy. The more it makes, the more it finds an efficient way to produce the dolls. This is a picture book about 'puppies born in human hands.' It shows horrific facts that there are people running a puppy mill and that our beloved pets might be coming from the mill. They treat our pet as a product made by a machine, and you can't find any respect for life in the mill. The artist chooses an etching technique to illustrate symbolically a cold metallic human attitude of disrespect for life.

THE DANCE

"Chopsticks dance? No way. How could chopsticks dance?"

We dance holding chopsticks at least twice or three times a day. We danced while we picked up side dishes, and also while we ate noodles. Chopsticks can't dance alone. It's because they have to pick up something in order to dance. Unskilled dance is fine, when you dance with your partner. From now on, look at how the chopsticks dance. And dance together with them. You will then realize that you had a great partner beside you.

Where would this place be? Would it be the place where the monsters live? No! This is a place where you should visit once a month, or once in several months. So it's also a very familiar place to us. For some children and adults, this is a place where they do not want to go at all. There are scissors which go 'snip-snip' behind me, and blazing fire which makes things burn. This picture book shows us a hair salon from a different point of view. Pictures are only drawn by rollers, the big and red letters are expressed with texts and the small letters are expressed with typography, which suggests the idea of a hair salon. THE RAIN APARTMENT

by Kim Yeon-hee | Illus. by Cha Young-kyoung
KW 29,000 | 52p | 210X215
ISBN 9788956187952

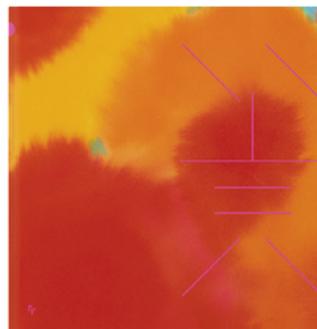

The greatest attractiveness in this book could be found in the change of abstract images which could be easily seen in normal life to conceptual images. This picture book made images of humans and animals from abstract images reflected in rainwater. The readers can look at interesting images only with pictures of the rain puddles, however, this book also allows them to open the door to a newer world by adding graphic design images, printed on tracing paper.

THE FLOWER·THE APPLE

by Kim Yoon-kyung
KW 19,000 | 40p | 210X220
ISBN 9788956187921

This book is a lovely picture book with two covers and no text. A flower bloomed. The flower sways in the wind. The wind becomes rain and soaks the flower petals. Their red and yellow water soaks into the ground. From there, plenty of white flowers bloom. Those flowers fall, and a red and yellow fruit forms. The fruit becomes redder and bigger, becoming an apple. Do you also think of an apple when you see a flower, and a flower when you see an apple, like this author?

ISBN 9788956187495

Sun-ok Lee, this year's illustrator in Bologna 2017, 2018, tells us a story about the color red, which lives with us in many different looks. All red looks as one, but if you look at it more closely, it isn't. The red color of the sun feels different when it's sunrise or sunset, or the color of blood when you're healthy or sick. Red that stands out, hot red, dangerous red, happy red, red wriggling out from our bodies. Red lives together with us, with its many different looks.

The wild dogs Gureumi and Dori once shared a single body with two heads, yet they were completely different. Exhausted from constant fighting, they wished for separate bodies and were finally granted them—but the peace didn't last. Gureumi missed Dori while hunting, and Dori, poor at hunting, grew weak with hunger and was eventually captured by humans. Fearing for Gureumi in the mountains, Dori used all his strength to bark loudly—will Gureumi hear him? This picture book tells a story of differences, showing how understanding each other can make us stronger together.

WHEN OUR BACKS TOUCH

There is a boy who has had his back pressed against a wall for his whole life. Unable to step out into the wide square, he has always been alone. One day, he gathers the courage to leave his home, but fear overwhelms him, and he collapses. Just then, a girl speaks to him. "I have a good idea." Will the boy really be able to take his back off the wall and walk forward on his own? Everyone has an invisible boundary that confines them. Feelings like anxiety and fear make us doubt ourselves. This picture book portrays the magical change that can happen when, faced with the wall of fear blocking our path, we find someone to lean on.

WHO LIVES UPSTAIRS?

The apartment where the animals live has been noisy since one day. "Who could it be? What is that sound?" Cats using massage machines, a tiger washing dishes, an elephant painting—who on earth is making all this loud noise? "I can't stand it anymore!" They go up one floor at a time, knocking on doors. Who is the real source of the noise? The small sounds of everyday life may become very loud to the neighbors living downstairs. But the moment they realize each other's discomfort, the neighbors apologize to one another, and their frozen hearts begin to melt. TANGERINE KOALA

On a big tree live three koalas. Like children in any family, they spend pleasant times playing together, but when their opinions clash, they sometimes argue and sulk. One day, a forest fire breaks out in the woods where the youngest lives. They rescue the youngest, tend to one another's injuries, and look after each other again with warmth and care. As time passes, the three grow up and gradually leave to start families of their own. Yet their hearts remain there together. Beloved for her warm perspective on family, fairy-tale-like storytelling, and charming illustrations, author Lilia gently portrays the family bond of siblings in a heartfelt way.

NO, NO, NO!

by Park Jeong-sub
KW 15,000 | 56p | 210X290
ISBN 9788956183985

Can't we say no to something that we don't want? The child in the story says NO very clearly and freely. Sometimes that seems a little naughty, but quite relieving at the same time. When an alien warns him that he was going to turn into a robot being so rigid, it alerts the readers for a moment, though. The child who wants to decide himself what he likes and what he doesn't like plays his straightforward attitudes in texts, pictures, and music. Why don't we focus on our own feelings today and say NO to the world? If you are afraid of speaking yourselves out loud because of the surrounding adults, scan the QR codes in the book and follow the instructions!

A VIRUS OF RUMOR

On Monday afternoon, Jae-hoon collapsed from unidentified sickness. On Wednesday Senna collapsed, too. Jeong-eun said she saw a red spot on Senna's wrist. Anxiety started to spread among the students. The following day, Sung-su also got a red spot. The school was closed temporarily. The number of patients was increasing without knowing what the disease really was. Doubt, mistrust and conjecture prevailed in their group chat room. What really made those kids sick? Was it the unknown sickness or the rumors?

GIVE MY ALLOWANCES BACK

As children grow and develop social relationships and a sense of independence, allowance is probably a common topic of conversation between parents and children. One of the biggest wishes of 3rd and 4th graders who want to do many things on their own is probably getting allowances from their parents. But it is not an easy decision for parents to give money to children who lacks the knowledge of economy. In this book, you can think about how to use allowances wisely through the trials and errors of the main character.

CANCEL MY LOVE
CONFESSION INSURANCE

In a society where a confession-proxy service called Confession Insurance has become an everyday part of life, Jion signs up for the insurance to confess her feelings to Hyunho, the male friend she secretly loves. She relies on a confession scenario designed by artificial intelligence and the calculated probability of success. But when she learns the true nature of the insurance, she begins to feel uneasy and repulsed. In the end, Jion exposes the problems behind Confession and questions whether her feelings were truly sincere. This story is a coming-of-age romance that asks what responsibilities come with expressing one's true feelings.

THIS STOP IS SEOUL STATION

Si-young, who grew up in a provincial town, struggles to become a "Seoul-person" in the unfamiliar city of Seoul. However, she soon realizes it is far from easy. Si-young's story goes beyond the experience of a single individual. It reflects the moment many young people choose Seoul, believing it to be an opportunity, only to confront the harsh walls of reality. Despite their desperation, the story suggests there remains a small hope. It is a story about youth who live without fully belonging anywhere, constantly questioning their own identity.
